

Global Peace Gateway Finds Home With New Orleans Sculpture Project

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

Deirdre Stoelzle Graves Director, Dart Society.

NEW ORLEANS – Global Peace Gateway of Art, Science & All Faiths a Portland, Ore.-based nonprofit organization dedicated to promoting art, science and all faiths, will place its gates sculpture at the University of New Orleans through a partnership with Sculpture for New Orleans.

Sculpture for New Orleans is a nonprofit organization run by sculptor Michael Manjarris, whose project aims to restore the visual arts scene post-Katrina and help make New Orleans a world arts destination via cultural tourism. The organization has already sited and installed more than 40 world-class, monumental sculptures throughout the city.

Giles, who founded Global Peace Gateway of Art, Science & All Faiths, was linked to the Sculpture for New Orleans project through the Dart Society, an organization of journalists dedicated to the coverage of trauma and violence.

Gifted to Giles in 1999 by the Los Angeles Archdiocese, it will be placed at the University of New Orleans, along with several other works acquired by Sculpture for New Orleans. The nine-piece gates assembly comprises approximately 3,000 lbs of hand-forged, labor-intensive, precision-fitted wrought iron and brass leaves.

They will be placed in a Stonehenge like formation to allow interaction and quiet reflection

"This is an ideal spot for the gates," said Giles of UNO. "The inquisitive minds of the students and others who see the gates will be inspired by the representation of spirituality and quantum physics."

I am honored to partner with these organizations to give exposure to this very important and unique sculpture," Giles said.

PROJECT POEM

Every atom of every-thing was once exiting an exploding nova star, yet science has no answer for the source of life or mentality. What is the nature of being and reality within this essentially mental Universe of more than 100 billion galaxies, where there is no such thing as solid any-thing? Paradoxically, everything is subatomic empty space; and yet we are in-it, we are of-it and we are self-aware. How then could the primal cause not be self-aware? The measuring intellect is, without question, a priceless tool; however, Love is, and has no equal for healing dis-ease when we are in need of refreshing from the "slings and arrows" of daily logistics. Esoteric Quantum Physics has proven an intimate inter-connection of each human consciousness with all others as our anger, greed and love degree resonates one with another. We heard, "the cynic has a lonely harbor." We heard, Socrates said, "death brings either dreamless sleep or we will be with out equal." *****
